FULL BLOWN TULIP

Corey married her husband Ryan in 1997 and shortly thereafter, a love affair of fabric began. Corey's family includes generations of quilt makers, so quilt making was a natural choice as an outlet for her fabric obsession.

When Corey's oldest daughter, Chloe, was born in 2005, her attention moved to clothing design and led to her appliqued children's clothing business, Little Miss Shabby. Corey spent a number of years designing and selling her creations until the birth of her youngest daughter, Elonie, in 2009. At that time, Corey focused once again on quilts, specifically quilt design.

Her quilt designs are often traditional with a modern twist. Corey's quilt patterns have been published in numerous magazines, collaborative books, and most recently she authored her first book, Playful Petals.

INSPIRED
 This past year, I sent my youngest daughter off to Kindergarten. As a stay at home mom for the last 10 years this was an exciting and bittersweet step. Last spring, discussing a possible job opportunity with my friends, I mentioned how interested I had become in designing fabrics. After chatting for a bit about fabric design, one of my friends matter-of-factly said, "Well, you should just do that." And so, armed with encouragement and a can do attitude, Prairie was born.

Prairie is the warmth and golden colors of a late summer afternoon. It is those last few lazy days when the bright, riotous colors of the season meld into the rich days of fall. It is where wildflowers grow in their brilliance along fences and in fields and little feet run barefoot to meet them. To me, Prairie signifies those last carefree days of summer before a new season begins filled with fresh adventure. Enjoy the ride! - Corey

SUGGESTION FOR QUILTING

The original New York Beauty is quilted with interlocking circles on background blocks, and equidistant rows of semicircles (resembling waves on a shore) on the 5" border. The pieced sections, such as the interlocking strips and the corner "fans" are outlined with quilting just inside the seam. The lines following the shape of the 1 and 2 carry three rows of stitches each, the lines following the shape of the 3 and 4 carry two rows of stitches each, and the lines following the shape of the 5 and 6 carry one row of stitches each.
